

Enrolling Online for your Electives

Your programme will normally include both MANDATORY and ELECTIVE modules. When you register on your programme at CIT, you will be automatically enrolled on the mandatory modules. You will be required to enroll online each semester for the elective modules you wish to take in the semester. You will receive an email early in each semester to your CIT email account, containing a web link and instructions on how to enroll online.

What are the consequences if I do not enroll for my electives?

If you do not enroll for your electives, the following are the consequences:

- You will not appear on class lists, and so will not be included on any email communication from your lecturer
- Your lecturer will be unable to enter your assessment marks on the system
- You will not be set up for access to "Blackboard" E-learning for that module
- You will not be included on the examination schedule for the module at end of semester

Changes to Elective Choice:

No online changes to electives will be permitted after the closing date. Any changes after this date will need to be made by calling in person to the Admissions Office, and will be subject to a late registration fee.

Choosing your Elective:

A list of the electives scheduled for your programme can be seen on the Modules Database <http://modules.cit.ie>. Click on your Department on the left-hand side of the Modules Database home page, then select your programme from the list, and see the semester schedules for lists of available electives in each semester.

Free Choice Electives:

A list of available free choice electives for your programme may be obtained from your Department.
